WE NOMINATE

The 47 members of the Princeton Postoffice's hard-working staff, this community's anonymous bearers of the Season's Greetings, whose normal 40-hour week is currently ballooning into the equivalent of six 13-hour days. Bucking the earliest Christmas crush in history, an onslaught intensified by the aspirations of John L. Lewis, Princeton postal employees by year's end will have handled some 5,000,000 pieces of first-class and non-metered mail for a 1946 average of 357 pieces for every man, woman and child living in and around the Borough and Township.

Cold statistics emphasize the scope of the Postoffice's responsibilities and the growth of a community generally described as a "quiet university town." The sale of stamps has more than doubled in a decade-plus, jumping from $112,000 in 1934 to $260,000 for the year ending September 30, 1946. Fourteen mailmen tramp 225 miles every day of double mail deliveries, two rural carriers cover 100 miles six mornings a week, while two full-time special delivery messengers push 350 door-bells a day. And this year no less than 5,000 undeliverable letters will have been routed to the dead-letter office.

The Postoffice hierarchy is topped by Postmaster Stephen W. Margerum, Assistant Postmaster Samuel E. Copner and Superintendent of Mails Orville B. Seville who coordinate the efforts of Carmine T. Altieri, Elwood A. Blydenburgh, John A. Britton, George F. Cahill, Ellery F. Calkin, W. Stuart Campbell, Richard A. Carroll, Richard M. Copner, William A. Corcoran, Edwin N. Cox, George V. Cranstoun, Joseph S. Cruser, Alonzo Cunningham, James J. Davidson, Nicholas H. Diaforli, John L. Dilworth, Basilio Ferrara, Robert T. Garrison, Frederick B. Goldsborough, Jerome A. Gorski, Raymond N. Grover, Frances E. Harris, Daniel W. Kane, Arncliffe Marcoline, Frank P. Margerum, Walter T. Margerum, Leo J. McCloskey, Patrick W. McCloskey, James W. Moore, Walter E. Morrison, Charles F. Murray, LeRoy Z. Page, Louis J. Paulino, Marsden Peabody, Angelo Provenzo, James V. Quick, Hazel M. Reed, Nicholas N. Rosso, Stanley Stewart, John C. Sutphin, Robert Thompson, James C. Wheeler, James H. Wheeler, Jewell B. Wright.

For their heart-warming enthusiasm in unanimously signing a Postoffice Department pledge that reads in part, "I will not engage in a strike against the Government of the United States"; for the understanding and tact generally displayed in interpreting 2,363 pages of Postal Laws and Regulations for all of Princeton; the above-named are TOWN TOPICS' candidates for Bars Seek Later Closing. Half a dozen bar and tavern owners have petitioned the mayor and council to extend the closing from 12 midnight to 1 a.m., five days a week. Saturday closings would remain at midnight, according to their suggestion. They base their request on the need for extra revenue to meet higher costs and taxes.

Mayor Morgan plans to confer with Township officials, who permit a 2 a.m. curfew and open Sundays, in the hope that a closing hour mutually satisfactory to both municipalities can be set. The measure must be ordinances if approved by the governing body. Said the mayor to the petitioners: "We live in a community in which the church groups are very strong."

Boom in Petitions. Four other requests were made of the governing body at this week's session: the undergraduate council asked that safety measures be adopted to protect students at the Prospect Avenue-Washington Street crossing; 33 residents of John and Lytle Streets voted against "installation of a swimming pool" in that area, a project they had apparently confused with plans to place swings and seesaws near the wading pool already there; Mercer Engine Company No. 3 sought new doors for its building on Chambers Street; and 19 Harold Avenue residents asked that the street be lighted.

The latter undertaking will be part of a campaign to brighten several borough thoroughfares, principally among

It's New to Us

This week, we will try to lend a hand to Santa Claus himself—although judging by the abundance of presents for children in Princeton shops, he has already been here and done very well on his own.

The Center. Doll furniture—what with high chairs, strollers, playpens, beds and swings, there is nothing in a doll's life which cannot be taken care of here; there are also unpainted chairs ready for painting by industrious little owners; jigsaw puzzles—four kinds, from a few large pieces to intricate and beautiful large masterpieces for the brainchildren; nursery lamps—adorable blue and pink with nursery rhyme illustrations on their wooden bases, a present for mother as well as child; washable lambswool pups, more appeal than anything we have seen in months; child's cosmetics—lovely sets, from baby soap, lanolin skin cream and powder for the smallest to bubble bath and shampoo for the pre-glamor girl.

The Little Clothesline. North Star all wool buntings—baby really comes into his own with these lovely soft "coveralls"; a shirred waistline, plus a ribbon-bound bonnet that gathers, will make a veritable fashion plate out of the tiniest wearer; Vogue dolls—three sizes, from tiny and dainty to fairly large and stylishly clothed, all with real hair and closing eyes; mittens—hand-crocheted, in navy, red and white with gay contrasting trimming.

The Little Gallery. Doll house furniture—these tiny antique reproductions by John Held Jr., are really better designated as collector's items than doll house furniture, but for your very favorite little girl we can think of nothing more wonderful than starting a collection of them in the old "add-a-pearl" style. Children's paintings—a bewitching assortment of Muriel Dawsons and Margaret Tarrants, with a few Disneys scattered among them, with their beguiling children, elves and animals looking like illustrations in children's books but far lovelier than most.

The Music Shop. In one room, especially planned for just this, you can go through a large collection of children's records and play them at will. There are records for every child who lives with a victrola: for the very beginners, songs and stories (no old favorite is overlooked) on unbreakable, in some cases illustrated, records; next come recorded stories with pictured reading accompaniment. There is a wonderful selection narrated by well-known actors, such as "Goldilocks" by Margaret O'Brien and "Robin Hood" by Basil

News of the Theatres

The Playhouse

Two Years Before the Mast (Fri., Sat.) ought to be censured for not following the book, still must be given credit as good, adventuresome entertainment. Brian Donlevy, William Bendix, Alan Ladd in a bang-up sea story.

Undercurrent (Sun. through Wed.) returns Katharine Hepburn and Robert Taylor to the screen for the first time since '44 in a romantic melodrama which develops a psychological mystery theme. Once they are married, Mr. Taylor's unseen brother thoroughly complicates the plot, which is unfortunately rambling and lacking in overall interest.

Angel on My Shoulder (Thurs., Fri., Sat.) tells in fantasy form of a judge who sets juvenile delinquents aright, is challenged by the devil himself for sharply decreasing potential citizens of his domain, finally triumphs over all Satan's machinations. Imagination and humor are given good play. With Paul Muni, Anne Baxter, Claude Rains.

The Garden

Young Widow (Fri., Sat.) features Jane Russell's features and a story about a girl reporter whose husband was killed in the war. In a plausible story, she finds life can go on without him.

The Seventh Veil (Mon., Tues., Wed.) made in England over a year ago, tells of a pianist who develops a mania that she will lose the use of her hands. The plot is fair, the delightful musical score is better.

Criminal Court (Thurs., Fri., Sat.) ranks as average murder mystery fare. Fast-moving in spots.

"Xmas presents wrapped in gay Xmas paper." The Little Clothes Line.
